

SEX. Not gender ... sex. I have said in my Erotic Manifesto *: I worship sex; I regard as sacred the sex I have with my loved-one. It has been said the sex drive is a motivating force in our lives. For me it is that in spades. With my libido I fantasise and enjoy erotic / sexual imagery; go to: www.erotic-photoart.com then to /blog.aspx ... and for erotic expressionism visit /sorayama.aspx So there: Guilt-free, art-ful sex; not for procreation, but recreation.

\ for my manifesto visit PORNOGRAPHY, go also to INTIMACY*

One may well ask, what is the difference between sex and making love? Well, the former is a physical activity ... the latter is the coming together of two loving partners in a soul-ful union.

However, making love may or may-not involve sex. It may simply be an expression of one's love by one of many means ... such as gentle, loving presence. But it may include lustful, passionate sex.

see also PRESENCE

---

SIDDHARTHA. "It seems to me, Govinda, that love is the most important thing. I think it is important to love the world, to regard all beings with love and respect." "But that is what the Buddha called illusion," said Govinda, "he preached compassion, tolerance and patience, but he forbade us earthly love." "Here, Govinda, we find ourselves in the conflict of words - and that is why I distrust words so much. How could he not love - he who recognised all of humanity's vanities, but who nonetheless devoted a long life solely to help people? Of importance are not the words, Govinda, but the deeds. "Knowledge can be communicated with words, but not wisdom. One can find wisdom, be fortified by it, do wonders through it, but one cannot teach it. I suspected this when I was young and it was this that drove me away from teachers. And here is a thought I have had: In every truth the opposite is equally true."

*Siddhartha by German/Swiss writer
Hermann Hesse (1877 - 1962)*